The City was approached early on by the Republican Party about providing funding to cover a portion of the expense caused by having to use multiple polling places for the primary, since all candidates in recent elections had filed as Republicans. These discussion ended once three individuals filed their candidacy as members of the Constitution Party.

The same individuals worked as poll workers for both the Republican Primary and the General Election. The City paid for their time spent training for their election duties. The Republican Party was responsible for their payroll expenses during the primary itself. The City provided no other funding.
